One United Nations Park Teams Up with BoffilDePadova

One United Nations Park, the condominium building designed inside and out by Meier Partners along the East River waterfront in Manhattan's Murray Hill, is now offering building residents exclusive pricing opportunities and complimentary design services from BoffilDePadova. The announcement comes along with word that the building has unveiled two model residences by BoffilDePadova; it's the first time the Italian firm has collaborated with a residential building in New York to design furnished model homes.

Condominiums begin on the building's 28th floor, affording the residents views over Manhattan and the East River. Currently available residences have one- to four-bedroom layouts with prices starting at $1.38 million. In addition to an in-residence Crestron smart-home system that regulates lighting, temperature, and motorized shades, amenities include a private underground parking garage with a motor court as well as a fitness center with a 70-foot indoor lap pool overlooking the East River.
